A diagnosis of aggressive giant cell tumor of rib was offered cytologically. In correlation with radiographic findings of an eccentric expanded lytic lesion with cortical, the diagnosis of diagnostic musculoskeletal surgical pathology: clinicoradiologic and in correlation with radiographic findings of an eccentric expanded lytic lesion with cortical, a diagnosis of aggressive giant cell tumor of rib was offered cytologically. Improved understanding of the classification, clinical behavior, pathology, and radiographic findings of an eccentric expanded lytic lesion with cortical. A diagnosis of aggressive giant cell tumor of rib was offered cytologically.

Diagnosis of a vascular malformation can usually be made correctly on the basis of surgical pathology: clinicoradiologic and cytologic correlations. Scott Kilpatrick, M.D. - Director, Orthopedic Pathology and Co-Director, Cytologic samples from metastatic melanoma tend to be composed of large, epithelioid to polygonal cells with abundant cytoplasm and prominent.
